What is Public Health?

Public Health
Prevent. Promote. Protect.

Public health is the science of protecting and improving the health of people and their communities. This work is achieved by promoting healthy lifestyles, researching disease and injury prevention, and detecting, preventing and responding to infectious diseases. Overall, public health is concerned with protecting the health of entire populations. These populations can be as small as a local neighborhood, or as big as an entire country or region of the world.

CDC Foundation, 2024

Public Health is more than just health care. It's about serving Essex County, fostering connections, and collaborating with local partners to make health care accessible for all in our community.

National Public Health Week recognizes and supports the Essex County Office of Public Health Management.
